

WGM Group is a community-centered Montana consulting firm offering comprehensive civil engineering, land-use planning, survey, environmental and water resource consulting services. Russ Radliff is a Water Resource Specialist with WGM Group and a power user of Water Sage.

As a Water Resource Specialist with WGM Group, Russ is part of the most qualified team of water rights experts in Montana. Historically, when responding to specific water right inquiries, he would sometimes need to say, "I need to look into it and get back to you" so he could take the time to research and answer their question with certainty. But Water Sage changed all that.

For example, he received a call from a client who was purchasing acreage to add to his ranch. The client's neighbor told him he owned water rights associated with a diversion and ditch system that originated on his property. The client called Russ to check and confirm this information. Russ did a water rights and land parcel search by screen boundary, identified the appropriate land parcels, points of diversion, sources, and priority dates and provided this to the client while on the phone.

What used to take hours of due diligence now takes minutes.

When clients call, they expect me to know in depth answers to situations related to their properties and their neighbors' properties. Water Sage allows me to quickly answer someone's question, allowing me to be the expert they expect.

I keep Water Sage open on my desktop all day. It's a tool I use throughout the day to answer questions, do quick visual searches and quickly move on to other important matters.
